

FOREWORD.

The Editors extend their thanks to those teachers and others who have, by their contributions, made the publication of this Bulletin possible. They have given us their ideas and these we may regard as a basis for discussion so that teachers in general may be able to traverse the widest possible field.

The opinions expressed are not "official" and it is the policy of the Editors to give individual teachers the liberty to express their opinions, because they feel that free discussion and argument may be a good way to disseminate ideas.

Please do not be reluctant to express your views, be you a junior teacher fresh from your University or College, or an experienced senior teacher grown grey in the service of our children. If your article is not published, and it is hoped that there will be sufficient material for us to be selective, do not feel that it is because of lack of merit. Some other teacher's contribution may appear to be more likely to provoke discussion.

If you have some idea to ventilate, if you are not sure how to tackle some aspect of your work, if you can see some matter which you believe calls for revision, let us hear from you. You will help us if you are able to type your articles, using double spacing and one side of the page only. Do not, on the other hand, withhold your contribution merely because you cannot have it typed.

Please forward all material to: F. J. Brown, 9 Bromley-avenue, Pymble, or I. C. Young, 38 Austral-avenue, Westmead.
